

STORYTELLERS WANTED

Become a part of
Stories in Living Color

Who? Why, YOU, of course! Paired with someone you'd like to get to know better.

What? Stories in Living Color is a project of the Storytelling Association of California (SAC) that works at bridging the divides in our country through pairs of storytellers who explore their racial, cultural, and personal differences through stories for the purpose of greater understanding, appreciation, and respect.

Where? Currently we are Zooming. Pairs of tellers get to know each other via Zoom. Working on and refining stories is also done via Zoom, with the help of a coach if the tellers desire. The stories are then told on Zoom, at least for now.

When? Our first six sessions took place once a month, September 2020 through February 2021. Pairs are currently working on their stories and will tell them when they are ready. At this point, June and September are available.

Why? Sharing stories of prejudice or discrimination help us all understand experiences beyond our own. In this way, we work towards building a more compassionate and knowledgeable world.

How? Check out the Stories in Living Color section of the SAC website <http://www.storysaac.org/stories-in-living-color.html>. There you will find more information, and a list of interested tellers who are available for pairing. Contact Rick Roberts (rickroberts@tds.net) for more answers, and to indicate your interest. Work with someone you already know and want to get to know better, or talk with Rick about a possible partner.

We really want to hear your story!
Come join us.
